The party who came into this office and stole a 500 Box of R. C. Cards is known; and will be prosecuted next Court. A word to the thief should be sufficient!

Chronic Stomach Trouble Cured.

There is nothing more discouraging than a chronic disorder of the stomach. It is not surprising that many suffer for years with such an ailment when a permanent cure is within their reach and may be had for a trifle. "About one year ago," says P. H. Beck, of Wokelee, Mich., "I bought a package of Chamberlain's Tablets, and since using them I have felt perfectly well. I had previously used any number of different medicines, but none of them were of any lasting benefit." For sale by all dealers. adv.

There will be a series of meetings at the M. E. Church beginning Monday evening 7:30 by regular pastor. Everybody invited.

The Forty Year Test.

An article must have exceptional merit to survive for a period of forty years. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy was first offered to the public in 1872. From a small beginning it has grown in favor and popularity until it has attained a world-wide reputation. You will find nothing better for a cough or cold. Try it and you will understand why it is a favorite after a period of more than forty years. It not only gives relief—it cures. For sale by all dealers. adv.

IGNATZ KRESS, Sr., Prop.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & CO., Props., Toledo Ohio. Sold by Druggist, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation. adv.

Merchants Held Up.

Every fellow who wants to make a dime starts out on some advertisement scheme, which is no good. The only way to advertise to get results is by placing your ad. in a newspaper. Curtain ads, dodgers, fence ads and program ads are all money wasted. People don't go to shows to read ads or pay any attention to such ads. It's a waste of money. Many have some scheme to make money and hold up the merchant to put through some idea of their own upon a paying basis, by holding up the merchants. Do not be misled. It may encourage such business, and if every merchant and business man would say no this hold-up advertisement business would stop. Who ever heard of a legal notice or court notice being placed in some program. It's just as foolish to place any other kind of advertisement in this manner. People buy advertising space for results and if they don't get them, then they are cheated. So if you want results, use the press. It is the only true and paying way to advertise.

A Little Woman.

"The boys all want to kiss me," Said the little Anna May. Her mother cried, "Why, bless me! Child, you don't mean what you say?"

But Anna May repeated Her complaint in tearful tones—"And the worst one's that con-ceited

Little freckled Rollo Jones, "He meets me on the highway. Goin' to school an' comin', too An' he always gets in my way, Now what am I to do?"

"You should run away from Rollo Then, my child," her ma-replied.

"But suppose he shouldn't follow?"

The little maiden sighed.

WITCHCRAFT IN ENGLAND.

The Last of the Judicial Prosecutions and Executions.

Sir Matthew Hale, it is true, had hanged two poor women at Cambridge in 1664, but a few years later Lord Chief Justice Holt set himself strongly against such charges and in every case tried before him directed the jury to bring in a verdict of acquittal. In a celebrated trial at Guildford in 1701 not only was the supposed witch found not guilty, but her false accuser, one John Hathaway, was condemned to a year's imprisonment and to stand in the pillory three times. Yet, horrible to relate, a woman named Hicks and her daughter, a child of nine, were hanged together, at Huntingdon on July 23, 1716, for raising a storm of wind in league with the devil.

The last judicial sentence for witchcraft in England was in 1736, one Jane Wenham being actually found guilty, according to the indictment, of "conversing familiarly with the devil in the form of a cat." The judge, however, procured a reprieve for poor old Jane, and she was ultimately released, to end her days in peace.

Last, the witchcraft act was repealed for the United Kingdom in the same year. It was quite time for only one thing earlier, in 1727, a woman was brought before Captain David Ross, deputy sheriff of Sutherland, charged with "causing her daughter to be bewitched by the devil," and so making her both in hands and feet. The fact having been proved to the captain's satisfaction, the old woman was put into a tar barrel and burned at Dornoch. The weather being cold at the time, we are told that she "sat composedly warming herself by the fire prepared to consume her while the other instruments of death were getting ready."

The last attempt to execute a witch in England ended disastrously for the perpetrators. In 1751 at Tring two old people named Osborne, man and wife, being suspected of witchcraft, were seized by a crowd, stripped, cross bound and thrown into a pond. Both died of this brutal treatment. But the witchcraft act had been repealed, and a verdict of willful murder having been returned against one Coley, the chief instigator of the assault, he was in due course tried and hanged.—Cornhill Magazine.

First Stranger (on railway train).—So you are selling Professor Blank's new book, are you? Strange coincidence! I am Professor Blank Second Stranger.—That so? Then you wrote the very book I am agent for? "Yes. The hardest work I ever did was writing that book." "Well, well! That's another strange coincidence. The hardest work I ever did was trying to sell it."—New York Weekly.

The Old Constitution.

The Constitution originally carried forty-four guns. A particularly interesting history is connected with this ship. During the war with the Barbary powers in 1802 she was Commodore Preble's flagship in the Mediterranean and played a conspicuous part during the whole war. Lieutenant Wadsworth, who was blown up before Tripoli in the ill fated Intrepid was one of the officers of the Constitution. In the course of the war with England in 1812 the English papers laughed at the Constitution and spoke of her as "a bundle of pine boards sailing under a lot of striped bunting." But when under Captain Hull she captured the English frigate Guerriere, a vessel of nearly equal force, the people who had before ridiculed her called her "one of the staunchest vessels afloat." A few months after this victory the Constitution, then commanded by Captain Peabridge, compelled one of the finest frigates in the British navy, the Java, to strike its colors.

Glass Polishing.

Glass grinding is effected by the use of emery powder of various degrees of fineness. But it has been shown that this grinding cannot be carried beyond a certain point, however fine a powder may be used. In fact, a continuation of it undoes the work and breaks the surface up again. The most finely ground plate, if largely magnified, is shown to be covered with tiny bits which no grinding will remove. The work is therefore continued with rouge carried on a pad of rosin, which gradually smooths down the elevations between the pits. Hydrofluoric acid gas corrodes glass very rapidly, but a weak solution of it melts away the roughened surface and leaves a fine polish underneath. This method is used where very fine adjustments of the surface are required—as, for instance, in lenses for telescopes and microscopes.

Prudence and Zabel.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1913, by T. C. McClure.]

Prudence Smith and Zabel Winters met at spelling school and were impressed with each other. Zabel would have married her if the Widow Penrose hadn't mixed in. She wanted the young man for herself, and in awesome whispers she imparted the information that Prudence Smith was knocked and would never be able to stand at a washtub or run up and down the cellar stairs. The young man was at once impressed. He ceased to speak Prudence on Sunday nights and assure her that he longed to jump over precipices for her sake, and of course she resented it. She went about with her chin in the air and asked for no explanations, and so relations were strained for many long months. Then Zabel's mother found out what was the matter with him and set him right. The widow had lied. Zabel made it up with the girl. The doves came back again and turtled, a new date was set for the marriage, and Farmer Smith reached out his horny hand for a shake and said:

"Zabel, god turn your buttons, you're gittin' the real thing, and you orter be the happiest man in Woodchuck county."

Zabel was a good boy, a good worker and a good husband. His second wife, after a long illness, died about Zabel's mother's birthday. The most awful thing he ever confessed that the young man had done was to go mad with grief and cut the throat of his wife. He had done it. The frog had jumped down Zabel's throat one day when he was drinking from the horse pond, and, though thousands of inducements had been held out to him, nothing could prevail upon him to jump out.

Well, where is the young girl, no matter how her heart tunks with love, who is going to marry a young man with a live and growing frog in his stomach? She can't be found. She wasn't found in this case. Prudence Smith cooled off on Zabel Winters, and he went about with his chin in the air and was too proud to ask for an explanation. It was a year before one came. Then a lightning rod man stayed overnight at Smith's, and after supper he got to talking about frogs. Seeing he was posted on the subject, Prudence made bold to ask him if he had ever heard of a frog taking up inside quarters, and he answered that such a thing was absolutely impossible and beyond belief. Zabel Winters had probably swallowed a small fish and the fish might be growing, but if left alone he could in time be fished for and caught. That settled the frog question, and Zabel was invited to come around and make up. He got a bustle on him, and the turtledoves sang soft and low, a new date was appointed, and Farmer Smith stopped chopping wood long enough to extend a hand and say:

"Zabel, you got durned idiot, don't you know when you've got a good thing? Don't fool around any more."

Zabel didn't want to, but before it had been decided which minister should marry them old Mrs. Snyder struck his trail. She was too old to marry, but not too old to utter a warning for the benefit of a young man who had put in a day hoeing her garden and refused to take pay for it. She told him right straight out that Prudence Smith snored like a steam engine, that she had six toes on her right foot and only four on her left, that she had St. Vitus' dance when a baby and that it was sure to come back on her some day. It might not be a year after marriage that Zabel would come up from the cornfield some afternoon and find her dancing all around the dooryard and kicking as high as a fence. That settled Zabel. He wanted Prudence, but he didn't want a dancing dervish. More coldness, more strained relations. It was a full year before old Mrs. Snyder proved a liar, and it took three months longer to make up and set another date. Things had run smoothly to within a fortnight of the date when a tin peddler came along and bought a sheepskin of Zabel and then told him that Prudence Smith was deaf in the right ear, nearsighted in both eyes and would be tongue tied before she was two years older. Zabel hadn't noticed the deafness or blindness, but he believed in tin peddlers and at once grew livid. Result, another year lost.

Fate was still in the game, however, and when everybody, including the two principals, had made up their minds that there would be no marriage she came loafing around to do her duty. Farmer Smith and his daughter were in the village one day buying calico and brown sugar when Zabel Winters appeared. He had eggs to sell for hickory shelling. The lovers were brought face to face, but they didn't speak. They thought of frogs and St. Vitus' dance and six toes and were turning away when Father Smith reached out one hand for his daughter and the other for Zabel and said:

"Say, are you two got durned idiots?"

"Um!" replied Prudence.

"Um!" replied Zabel.

"If you wasn't you'd come along with me to the preacher and get married and hev this tarnashun thing settled to once and for good and all."

Prudence looked at Zabel.

Zabel looked at Prudence.

Then they smiled and edged up near each other, and on how later they were man and wife.
